FALL TALKS CONCERNING CONVICTION

ARTHUR MAUL DIES IN CHAIR FOR SHOOTING

Akron Policeman's Slayer Smiles As Death Mask Is Placed Over Face.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 2—(INS)—With a bleeding heart and the word "Mother" tattooed on his chest, 24-year-old Arthur Maul expiated his crime of first degree murder in the electric chair at the Ohio State penitentiary here last night.

The weighty and impressive silence of the death chamber was broken by the heavy thud of a fallen body when a newspaperman fainted.

Maul died with a smile on his lips and after taking a light-hearted leave of the world.

"How is it going, tonight," he asked W. W. Mathis, a Summitco detective, who had been instrumental in bringing about the arrest of the doomed man for the murder of Patrolman William Grubs in Akron on May 6, last.

Maul's voice did not quaver or show any signs of emotion. But when Mathis answered "Pretty fine," the county detective had to clear his throat with a slight cough.

As the slayer entered the death chamber between two guards, who were attired in the regular prison blue, Maul saw Rev. William Denton, an Akron mission worker. He walked over to the minister and shook hands. "Goodbye, pal," he said.

The 2,200 hundred volts of electricity was sent hurtling through his body at 7:36 o'clock and he was officially pronounced dead eight minutes later. Three different charges of current crashed through him, with a crackling, sizzling whine.

Thin wisps of smoke curled up from the electron strapped to his right leg, and when the death charge hit his body, he stiffened convulsively.

FACE HIDDEN

Of course, his face was hidden by that black, slit mask, which is so symbolic of death, but one could imagine that smile still playing about his features.

He was the calmest man to be executed for some time. Men either go weakly and stumbling to the chair or objecting and cursing their fate, though few take the latter course.

A drizzling rain seemed to throw dampness over the death chamber and the atmosphere was heavy. Many in that sober-faced semi-circle of witnesses broke out into a sweat during those eight minutes which semed like a half hour to many.

It was the first time in 101 electrocutions that it had rained.

In an interview on the afternoon of his death, Maul declared: "I'm ready to go. There's no help for it. Thank everyone for me. There's no use crying. I don't look like I'm crying, do I?"

His last meal consisted of veal chops, creamed peas, sweet corn, coffee and ice cream. It was a menu of his own choice. He asked for near-beer and it was supplied. When he asked for a second botle, it was brought, but it ramined untouched when he left the death cell to walk monchalantly into the death chamber.

PLEA FAILS

A last minute plea to the governor, which was made by his father and his sister Emily, both of Akron, had failed to save him.

He was attired in a blue coat, black trousers and a white shirt, fastened together by a somewhat soiled and unpressed tie.

The 24-year-old youth had been a cell-mate of Dr. James Howard Snook, 49, ex-Ohio State University professor, who is scheduled "to go out' on the day after Thanksgiving for the hammer-and-knife slaying of Miss Theora Hix, 24, then a college co-ed.

French Eyes Focus On Moderate Leader To Offer New Government

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT

PARIS, Nev. 2— All eyes focussed today upon Andre Tardieu, the moderate leader who promised to bring order out of political chaos by announcing a new government, which will have the majority support of the Chamber of Deputies, before nightfall.

Already hailed as the "coming man of France," M. Tardieu's prestige will be greatly exhanced if he succeeds where two other French political leaders, M. Daladier and M. Clementel, failed during the 12 days that have elapsed since M. Briand was deposed from the premiership.

M. Tardieu is expected to pay no attention to party lines in announcing the personnel of his cabinet. Although this, on the face of it, would appear to be a tarher difficult proposition, there are many who feel Tardieu in a position to do this successfully.

Although a moderate, he is strongly admired by the parties of the right and would probably get their whole-hearted support. It is hardly expected that he will get the whole-hearted support of the radical left wing, partly because his own leanings have sometimes been toward the right and partly because M. Briand's policies are not highly epproved of by several left leaders and M. Briand will be foreign minister in the new cabinet, if it is successfully formed. Nevertheless, by clever disposition of his cabinet posts, he may win the support of part of the more moderate section of the left wing.

Then there is another element to consider which may make the various parties give Tardieu a working majority with which to head the government.

President Doumergue has almost exhausted his supply of possibilities for the premiership with the present party distribution in the chamber. Should Tardieu fail, the president may find himself faced by the necessity of dissolving parliament and calling for a new general election.

Both the president and political leaders of all parties are averse to such a procedure at this time The nation's foreign problems, such as reperations, disarmamen, and the Rhineland question, are too pressing just now and a new election might seriously retard action upon them.

There are many who are wondering about M. Briand's manouveurs in this serious situation They are wondering why, when he had a chance to, he did not take advantage of the support of the Radical-Socialists and form a cabinet himself with a greater majority than he had before his eleventh government was overthrown. They are wondering why he alienated all possible Radical-Socialist support later by quarreling with M. DeLadier.

But the old wizard of both internal politics and international statesmanship is not telling.

MUDDY SCIOTO WATERS BLOCK BENFORD HUNT

River Becomes Higher and Swifter With General Three-Day Rainfall.

Late Wednesday the boys are said to have visited the Orphans home and at this time framed plans for escape.. Sometime Thursday they appeared at the home with an automobile taken from the Tiffin business district.

An inquisitive driver passing the brokendown Ford reported it to the sheriff of Franklin-co. He went to the car but none of the escaped children were there. He towed the car to a Columbus garage.

America's Appetite For Luxuries Guarantee Against Business Loss

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 —America's insatiamle appetite for luxuries and unrestrainable propensity for spending money was held out today as a negaly. certain guarantee against a serious business depression, feared in some quarters as a result of the $15,000,000,000 stock market crash.

Because Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen are real spenders and want several changes of raiment, different type of colored shoes, new automomiles every two or three years, the latest radios and other necessities and luxurious innumerable, trade should be kept booming, in the opinion of treasury and commerce officials.

This spending habit, which grew out of war coupled with the rapid market recovery, drops in the London and New York rediscount rates, releasing of more than a billion dollars from the New York stock market through reduced brokers loans, and the assurance of a high treasury executive that easy money is here—all pointed to business and plenty of it for the winter season.

In fact the treasury predicted a Christmas buying jamboree not incomparable with the record trade of 1927 and 1928 holidays, despite the huge losses sustained by the general public in the market debacle.

"American prosperity is not built upon the sale of necessities such as bread and meat and necessary clothing," a treasury official said.

"Prosperity is here because the American people are spending billions of dollars every year for things they do not absolutely need. The sale of necessities may meet business overhead. The sale of luxuries is the 'gravy' that swells the difference between depression, just 'ordinary times' or 'prosperity'

"Even though the market did crash and billions in profits were wiped out, the people are not going to be satisfied to give up the luxuries to which they are accustomed They are going to buy and trust to future earnings to pay."

Experts were speculating today as to whether there would be further reductions in the federal reserve rediscount rates, following the cut from 6 to 5 per cent in New York, as an additional stimulant for business the other banks are on a 5 per cent level. In some quarters reductions to 4 per cent at all the banks was anticipated, provided the market does not show undue activity. It was pointed out that this would be a great advantage to winter business and might counteract the influence of the market break.

DENIES BRIBE FROM DOHENY VEHEMENTLY

Says He Borrowed Money From Friend and Lied Saying It Was McLean.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(INS). A blunder that deserves condemnation; not a crime that merits conviction for dishonesty and bribery.

That is Albert B. Fall's own verdict upon himself, set forth today in the first public statement which the ex-secretary of the interior has made since the long record of the oil scandals began unfolding in the criminal courts.

The former cabinet officer, now aged and broken in health, issued his statement after hearing Justice Hitz in district supreme court sentence him to a year in prison and a fine of $100,000 upon conviction of accepting $100,000 from E. L. Doheny after the lease of the Elk Hills naval reserve. The jury pronounced it a bribe.

It so moved Fall that he determined to break his long silence and issue a statement. In it, he admitted telling a falsehood to the senate committee as to where he obtained the loan of $100,000, but explained it on the ground that he was moved to this step in order to protect the Harding administration that had honored him.

"My borrowing the money may have been unethical," he said. "I certainly did not realize it at the time, and my employing a falsehood to prevent a volcano of political abuse pouring upon the administration that had honored me deserves condemnation.

"But neither one nor both justifies the charge that I was disloyal or dishonest as Secretary of the Interior and as a member of President Harding's cabinet.

In the early part of Nov., 1921, I made arrangements for a loan of Edward B. McLean, Esq., Washington, for $100,000, expecting to repay him out of funds due me from other people. About the middle of the month, Doheny and myself met. We had been lifelong friends. "I talked to him with great confidence, told him what I was doing and he offered to let me have the money to buy the Harris ranch, a loan which I had already arranged for. I preferred to make a loan of Mr. Doheny first, because he was estimated to be worth several hundred million dollars. I knew it would not inconvenience him, and my lifelong friendship with him made me prefer to be his debtor rather than of anyone else. If I had dreamed that my transferring the loan from where it was confessedly innocent, to Doheny, would make me a criminal, it ought to be obvious to any impartial mind that I would not have made the transfer.

"It never entered my mind that I was selling my official honor to Mr. Doheny, and I perfectly well know that he had no intent to dishonor me with a bribe.

"When I made the loan from Mr. Doheny, however, I confess that I should have realized, which I unfortunately at the time did not do, that I laid myself open to criticism.

"In December, 1923, nearly 18 months after I had retired from public life, I suddenly found myself assailed by my enemies with a demand to know where I got the money to buy the Harris ranch. I knew perfectly well, at that time that the Democratic leaders were preparing to wage war on the Republican administration by making charges of general dishonesty.

"My friend Harding was dead. The new administration would not want to be burdened with my defense. I knew then that if I disclosed that Doheny had loaned me the money an avalanche of political abuse would be let loose against the Republican administration, against Doheny, and against me. I knew the power of the public press, and how it could be used under such circumstances from the floor of the senate. I knew that under these conditions my reputation would be defamed, and that I would be unable to adequately meet in the public press the charges against me

"To avoid this calamity I made the unspeakable blunder of attempting to evade the matter by an untruth. I wrote the committee I had obtained the money from McLean. I thus made a bad matter very, very much worse.

MAKING THE BIBLE PRACTICAL

President Hoover says, "There is no other book so various as the Bible, nor one so full of concentrated wisdom. Whether it be of the law, business, morals or that vision which leads the imagination in the creation of constructive enterprises for the happiness of mankind, he who seeks for guidance in any of these things may look inside its covers and find illumination. As a nation we are indebted to the book of books for our national ideals and representative institutions. Their preservation rests in adhering to its principles."

The Sunday school presents a program of Bible study and the public service of worship offers practical Bible expositions. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY ?

The question concerning tribute was asked of Jesus as he was nearing the crucifixion. The plot was laid and the questions asked by those seeking a reason for an accusation that would make possible the crucifixion already determined upon. His masterly answer furnishes a principle on right relations to civil authority.

V. 13. "And they sent unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians that they might catch him in talk." Those who would crucify Christ being cowardly got others to do their work.

V. 14. "And they say unto him, teacher, we know that thou are true, and carest not for any one; for thou regardest not the person of men, but of a truth teachest the way of God; is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar or not?" They pretended to be humble and sincere; but they were masked enemies and conspirators. The value of a question largely depends upon the motive and spirit of the questioner.

V. 15. "Shall we give or shall we not give? But he knowing their hypocrisy said unto them, "Why make ye trial of me? Bring me a denerious that I may see it." Here was a fine trap; if he said they should not give, he would make himself guilty of treason against the Roman government; if he said they should give, he would infuriate the Jews. But some questions cannot be answered by a yes or no.

Vs. 16-17. "And they brought it. And he said unto them, whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Caesar's. And Jesus said unto them, render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's. In things which concern God worship, faith and conscience—we ought to be obedient to God alone and permit no man to interfere. In civil matters, where money, possessions, body, life are concerned, we ought to obey the government. We owe the government taxes, obedience and respect; we also owe the same duties to God.

Vs. 1-2. "Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers for there is no power but of God—and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment." Civil government is ordained of God. Bishop Moule says, "Where human law contradicts divine precepts (as when a Christian is commanded to do wrong) then obedience to the highest authority must take precedence."

V. 3. "For rulers are not a terror to the good work but to the evil. And wouldst thou not have fear of the power? Do that which is good and thou shalt have praise from the same." He that aims to do good will naturally obey the government and needs not fear.

V. 5. "Wherefore, ye must needs be in subjection, not only because of their wrath but also for conscience sake." Self respect demands the person to heed the voice of conscience which if properly educated makes a great force for civil law.

V. 7. "Render unto all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor." Tribute is the taxes paid by a subject nation; custom is the money paid to support civil government, fear is the awe felt to the person executing justice; honor is the respect due any person in authority.

Vs. 13-16. "Be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; for so is the will of God, that by well doing ye should put to silence the ignorance of foolish men." We cannot disregard any law without endangering all law and by our example spread the infection of lawlessness.

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

©1927 D CARL YODER

1. What are the tests of a good government?
2. How should we proceed to improve the government?
3. Why is it a duty to vote?
4. Why are taxes unpopular?
5. How cure lawlessness?
6. What should a good citizen do regarding a law that is morally wrong?
7. What would be Christ's solution of the enforcement of our prohibition laws?
8. How make the world safe for prohibition?

Clericus says: "That man has the greatest liberty who most completely satisfies his major human instincts—self preservation, workmanship, home-making, self-respect—while maintaining an harmonious relation to the social group in which he lives."

Lesson Prayer: "Give us the needed wisdom regarding social, civil and political problems that will enable us to do our part in projecting truth into the public mind and to so express ourselves at the polls and in practice that will give a sense of moral dignity to all law and order."

SPECTACULAR RUNS DEFEAT TIGERS AT WESTERVILLE

An 80-Yard Gallop By Schick, Star Quarterback, and Run From Punt Furnish Thrills For That Contest—Davis Gets Loose For 38-Yards But Can't Score—Ashville Here Next.

Although outscored by three touchdowns, the Circleville high school Tigers put up a real fight on the Otterbein College field Friday only to lose to Westerville by a 19-0 score.

Spectacular runs featured the game and they alone were responsible for the Tiger's defeat. Schick of the Westerville aggregation made an 80-yard run for a touchdown in the second quarter.

The first period of the game was all Circleville for the Tigers had no difficulty in slithering through the Westerville line for five and 10-yard gains. They lost possession of the pigskin on the Westerville 22-yard line after which Westerville managed to keep the ball in their possession the rest of the quarter.

SCHLICK GETS LOOSE

The second quarter was uneventful it was over half way gone. It was then that Westerville's star, Schick, toted the ball from his own 20-yard line for a touchdown on an end run. The extra point was scored and Westerville held a lead of 7-0.

In the third session the Westerville team again scored with a pass over the line of scrimmage The game then waged back and forth with neither team scoring.

Westerville in the fourth quarter received a punt which Circleville kicked from behind their own goal-line. Troupe of Westerville received the punt in the center of the field and after shaking off several tacklers raced for another goal which made the score, Westerville, 19; Circleville, none. But the Tigers seemed to rally in the last few minutes of the game and started a steady march toward the Westerville goal. When the final whistle blew the Tigers were on the Westerville 10-yard line fighting for a chance to score.

Hundley, Davis, Rector and Adkins were the outstanding players in the game for the Tigers while Schick, Troupe and Glover were best for the Westerville team.

WILLIAMSPORT GRIDDERS, LED BY TOMLINSON, BEAT ASHVILLE

A hard hitting Williamsport football machine pulled the unexpected Friday at Williamsport when it defeated the Ashville gridders by a 7 to 0 score.

The contest was played in a downpour of rain, and although the field was in good shape because of heavy sod, the ball became soaked and was hard to handle, thus causing numerous costly fumbled.

To Williamsport's two tackles. Redman and Frazier; center, Carmean, and halfback, Tommy Tomlinson go the lion's share of the credit for the Williamsport victory.

SMASH McGLONE

Time after time one of these three linesmen would smash through and sock an Ashville attempt at yardage before it had hardly gotten to the line. Through the defensive ability of these men, McGlone, Ashville's crack ball toter, was held to almost no yardage.

Most of the Williamsport offensive was Tommy Tomlinson, who cracked off the Ashville tackles for gain after gain, and climaxed his ground-gaining abilities with a 23-yard dash around his right end in the second period for the touchdown that won the ball game. He dropkicked a perfect extra point and the score was 7 to 0. It remained that way to the end of the game.

Tomlinson's break came when one of his ends blocked an Ashville punt and covered the leather.

On the second play Tomlinson made his run.

In the third period Ashville almost had a touchdown, and at hand, it looked like McGlone was over the goal he was stopped on the 1-2 yard line.

In Keeping with its Fine Car Engineering Standards

OLDSMOBILE PROVIDES PRESSURE LUBRICATED PISTON PINS

A feature characteristic of high-priced cars . . . . . .

Incorporated in the construction of Oldsmobile's big 62-horsepower engine are many features which have long been considered marks of high quality in automobile power plants.

Here the piston wall has been cut away to show the piston pin. To this vital point of wrist-like action, where reciprocating parts move thousands of times a minute, Oldsmobile forces oil through the rifle-drilled connecting rod.

Piston pins, for example, are pressure lubricated through connecting rods which are rifle-drilled throughout their entire length. Serving as connections between rods and pistons, the pins act constantly as bearing surfaces under great strain. The stress imposed by compression and combustion is enormous, and, to assure smoothness and long life, piston pins must be perfectly lubricated. And the only positive method of lubrication is by direct pressure from the oil pump through crankshaft and connecting rods. According to specifications shown in the July issue of "Motor," only twelve makes of cars, in addition to Oldsmobile and Viking, offer this feature—and the majority of these are priced above $2000. In Oldsmobile, all main, connecting rod and camshaft bearings are also lubricated under pressure.

Many other quality features include controlled cooling; engine driven fuel pump; counterbalanced crankshaft; and complete engine protection afforded by oil filter, air cleaner, gasoline strainer, and crankcase ventilation.

These and many other advantages characterize Oldsmobile as a thoroughly fine motor car. Come in today and examine the car. Drive it yourself. Discover to your own satisfaction how much Oldsmobile's fine-car construction contributes to the excellence of Oldsmobile's performance.

Odd Tropical Fishes

The most beautiful of tropical sea-folk is the moonfish, often called the ghostfish because of its paper-thin form of a silvery color. The angelfish is as gayly colored as the rainbow and with long, trailing fins of contrasting tints. The squirrelfish flaunts a deep coral shade and deep dark eyes. The parrot-fish attracts attention as much by its gorgeous colorings of turquoise blue, plum purple, or bright green as by the peculiar bony beak.

"THE BIG BREAK"

Business and trade continue good. Industrial activity in major lines averages better than that of last year, even in fields now experiencing the inevitable and expected seasonal slacking which is part of their routine. Revenue freight loadings have been far above last year's averages So it may be fairly said that the landslide of prices in the securities market did not reflect the state of business or any visible prospect of a let-up in business activity. The trouble, such as it is, continues to be, as the experts say "within the market."

Somewhere in the vast financial system that has Wall Street as its useful center there is need of discipline and a sounder philosophy. The habit of legitimate investment, to which a large section of the population has been carefully trained by conservative bankers and corporations, is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. If unbridled manipulation of the prices of sound securities is to be permitted, investment will be discouraged.

A few powerful groups will grow richer. But the country will ultimately be poorer because of the fear of the general public to pool its hopes, its enthusiasm and its capital with those of the industries that have done most to increase the wealth, the happiness and the strength of the country.

SENATOR BINGHAM

Senator Bingham of Connecticut seems to have paraded his lack of conscience rather prominently in the senate yesterday when he took more than an hour to say he saw nothing wrong with employing a manufacturing association secretary as a "dollar-a-year" expect to help frame the new tariff law. If Senator Bingham saw nothing wrong in the act he thinks radically different than a vast majority of the American people.

He might be forgiven his warped viewpoint but no one can take kindly to his denounciation of those who had mildly censured his action.

It is no wonder that hope for a new tariff at the present session of congress is gone. Such methods as been been employed, at least by Senator Bingham, lend no confidence to what is a highly complicated and much-criticized piece of legislation even when passed without intimation of scandal.

KNOWLEDGE

Knowledge does not apply itself: it lies dormant.

You must convert it into energy by the power of your thought

The difference between the $25-a-week clerk and the $25,000-a-year executive is solely one of thought.

The clerk may have more brains than the executive.

He may also have a better education, but he doesn't know how to apply his thought to get the greatest good from it.

If you have brains, use them.

If you have skill, apply it.

The world must profit by the use and application of your powers and therefore you.

We all have inspired moments when we see clearly how we may do great things—but we do not believe in them enough to make them come true.

An imagination which begins and ends in daydreaming, is weakening to character.

Make your daydreams come true.

Apply your knowledge.

HOPES FOR THE FUTURE

Blue Blood And Red

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER L.

SHE came to him with all pretense of indifference wiped out between them. Now at the last, faced with separation, all things became basic and unadorned with fancy.

"I don't think they know I slipped out," she said, with a hushed tremor. "If father found you here—I don't know what would happen."

"I had to see you," he breathed.

"I know . . "

"I had to see you even if your father took a shotgun and blazed away at me," Eddie declared "He thinks I'm trying to draw you down, Marian, but——"

"If father found you here—I don't deserve any such shameful treatment—but what can I do? I don't want you to go away thinking—that I——" Her voice faltered and stopped. "That you—"

"What?"

"That I think you are a terrible person," she managed to utter "There is some reason, I know, for that awful girl being here. But I can't imagine you are as vile as father thinks "

"God bless you for that!" His voice was strained with emotion. I'm in an awful mess on account of her—but theres' nothing wrong that I know of in moral ways—if you understand."

She looked now, as though she feared they might be overheard.

"We can't stand here talking in the road like this. Somebody might hear."

Behind Eddie a gentle hillside rose, with green carpet of grass and the deep shadows of scattered trees There, in the cool, secluded fragrance with moonlight silvering the slope, they could feel complete privacy in the dark shadowed pools

"Shall we go up there?" he asked, daringly.

For an instant she hesitated Then she nodded.

"I can't think what would happen if my father missed me."

"Don't think about it, dearest"

"I'm not—much." She smiled wanly.

"We're doing the very thing you thought we ought not to do." he urged. "Standing here where some one might see us."

Gently she slipped her hand in his—the touch of it was soft as a rose petal

If only he might hold it so for ever! His thoughts soared daringly; then fell to the depths again

He helped her across the ditch side of the road and together they climbed and disappeared into the concealment of the night and Summer trees

They found a knoll and sat on it hidden by shadows, two hapless mortals seeking sanctuary from a troubled world that pressed in too close around them Left to themselves, there would have been little distress between them whether or not love flowered or died a-borning. Other people, the rigid iron barriers erected by other hands, had created the stress that had sent Eddie and Marian flying like a pair of hunted animals to this brief, darkened spot.

And now that they were free from all human interference, it was strange how little the seeming obstacles between them mattered. Bewildering complications were the product of human design—not the result of love All about them lay the spell of summer's beauty silvered by moonlight

'I wonder if either of us remembers why we are here?" she said, dreamily.

He looked at her with tender eyes, and was conscious less of her beauty than her goodness, when a reply came from his lips

"Does it matter why — as long as we are here?"

"Maybe not," she reflected, frankly; "but I don't want to spoil this night by discussing terrible things with you—it's too beautiful."

"It may be our last time together for a long while," he said, sorrowfully. "What a shame it must end like this"

"What a shame!" she echoed faintly

DR. COPELAND SAYS—

BREATHING THROUGH NOSE IS ESSENTIAL

Dr. Copeland Stresses Danger of the Mouth Breathing Habit, Which Permits Cold Air, Laden With Dust and Germs, to Reach the Lungs

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

NOT long ago I told you about the importance of free passage of the air through the nasal cavities. It is not good for health to practice mouth breathing. The nose was planned by kind Nature to warm and cleanse the inspired air.

DR. COPELAND

Many persons do mouth breathing, not because the nasal passages are not free, but from sheer laziness. They make no effort to keep the mouth closed.

This is an unsafe practice. It permits the cold air, filled with dust, dirt and bacteria to scrape its way across the delicate breathing organs into the shivering air cells.

All this is wrong. The air should be breathed through the nostrils, to be heated by the rich blood supply and to be filtered clean by the hair-like processes of the cells covering the mucous membrane of the nose.

If the nose is stopped up all the time, find out why. The doctor, after his examination, will advise you what should be done to restore the nose to its normal use. You cannot hope to be a perfectly healthy person unless the nose is clear and working all the time to cleanse and warm the air.

After the air is taken through the nasal passages, it goes through the back of the mouth It goes from the throat into the windpipe.

The windpipe is a round tube, running from the throat into the chest Now it divides into two branches called the bronchial tubes One of them runs to the right lung and the other to the left lung

Each of these tubes divides and redivides into smaller and smaller branches The arrangement is much like that of a tree with its top down ward

At the tip of each of the smallest tubes are groups of air cells These are set on the ends of the tubes much as the grapes are clustered on the end stalks and stems of the bunch

The walls of the air cells are extremely thin The outer wall of each cell thin as it is is packed with tiny blood vessels In consequence it is possible for the oxygen of the cells to pass through the thin walls into the blood itself Then it is carried to every part of the body.

Let us review the travels of the air we breathe It passes through the nose where it is warmed and cleansed through the back of the mouth and throat into the windpipe Then it goes along the bronchial tubes and small divisions into the tiny air cells From there the oxygen gets into the blood to do its work among other things, of preparing the food for the proper use of the body

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Canned moonlight is the latest discovery of motion pictures and is to be seen in "Our Modern Maidens," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of ultra-modern youth will be seen at the Cliftona theatre Sunday as a sound synchronized production. Desiorous of obtaining soft moonlight touches in a highly romantic scene between Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and Joan Crawford the star, it was found that by careful lighting with incandescent lights, on silver painted leaves and other shrubbery used as a background, the effect could be obtained where real moonlight failed to photograph. Seven gallons of this silver compound was sprayed by air-gun on the grass and other foliage.

"Our modern Maidens" is described as an epic of the era of jazz-mad youth. An extraordinary cast, typical of youth, handle the various roles.

AT THE MET

With blaring trumpets and moaning saxophones not to mention resounding drums and lamenting trombones as his media of expression, Charles (Buddy) Rogers "jazztuned" his way across the audible silver screen at the Met theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday for his second appearance as a versatile orchestra leader.

"Close Harmony" is a paly of back-stage life, and Rogers, as the leading male character, plays a role for which he seems splendidly fitted. Doubtless his earlier training as a player in the student orchestra at Kansas University had something to do with the capable musicianship of this amazing young actor It was certain last night that the Buddy Rogers fans were agreeably surprised to see and hear their favorite in the kind of part they always wanted to have him perform for them. And those present who were not fans before the picture began were Rogerites after it ended in a blaze of musical color and romance.

Nancy Carroll, who was last seen with Rogers in the screen version of "Abe's Irish Rose" was gorgeous as the leading woman, playing the part of a song and dance headliner in a big cinema palace where Buddy and his band were given a try-out. Miss Carroll demonstrated the singing and dancing prowess that made her famous on the New York stage before she entered the "flickers."

The play has plenty of gripping plot and an abundance of sure-fire comedy, supplied by the stars and Jack Oakie and "Skeets" Gallagher. In sum, "Close Harmony" is rare entertainment.

BOOK REVIEW

All the fantasy of the ancient childrens stories, that have lived through the centuries, has been retained in the books written for youngsters by A. A. Milne. His stories, too, will live through the ages for he has the talent of fathoming a little child's mind, and writing stories they love.

His last book "The Christopher Robin Story Book," is a furtherance of his understanding of children It contains bits from his former books "When We Were Very Young," "Winnie—The Pooh" and others. In a great many homes these earlier books have been almost committed by the children who doved them, and by the growns-ups who read them.

Now with snatches of the first adventures of the characters, stored in corners of little minds, comes this collection on sale ready for the Christmas market. As the boys and girls who have grown three or four years since "When We Were Very Young" was published, open "The Christopher Robin Story Book," they happen upon "Teddy Bear" their eyes will open with joy that they have happened upon someone they already know. As they read farther they will find they have discovered a veritable treasure chest where they can pick stories which they once knew almost by heart, and which with the wisdom of a few more years they will appreciate more than ever

The rythm of the poetry and prose fastens itself in their minds and the characters in their hearts. The poems written by Pooh himself are never to be forgotten.

Milne's books are masterpieces in children's literature, and his latest, includes a hundred or more stories, about each of which an essay could be written. But on the surface, the sketches, the catchy hilt, and the inimitable combination of words, suffice to make his story book about Christopher Robin the best of the year for children.

AN OPEN LETTER TO HIS HONOR

R T Hedges,

Mayor

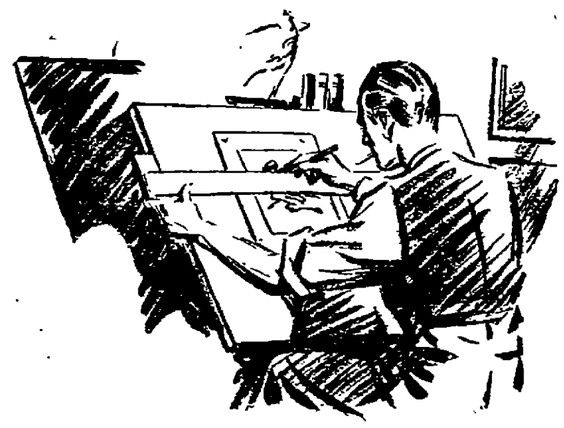

When the Attorney General of the State of Ohio ruled slot machines as unlawful, you ordered all machines in the city out of operation I met you on West Main st and you showed me a telegram from the operator of these Slot Machines asking you not to take any action until he the operator of the machines, had seen you

May I ask what persuasive argument did said operator offer to cause you to change your mind, so that you permitted the slot machines in the city to resume operation? Why?

Yours truly,

PROFITABLE BY-PRODUCTS MR. TAXPAYER

An Eastern paper carries the story that an immigrant coming to this country from London or Berlin leaves a city where the biggest item in public expense is the relief of poverty. He lands in this country where a goodly percentage of public expenditures goes toward the education of youth. The by-products of the two investments are different—a difference that tells much about the ideals and objectives of citizenship in this country.

To reduce the waste in poverty relief, it is necessary to go deeper than furnishing the daily bread. There is a basic cause and a corresponding remedy.

"Build" is our slogan in this country—build the youth into a life of useful, self reliant citizenship. Educate him in effort as well as intellect—create in him a selfconfidence, an ambiton, a will to work, an ideal and standard of pride and self-respect. These are all by-products of the school.

Youth is taught to be self-reliant in school and he becomes self-reliant after school. He is taught social relationship in school and he is a law abiding citizen afterward. He is taught independence of thought and action and he becomes creative. He is guided in his interests and aptitudes in school and he more readily finds himself in an atmosphere of work which produces happiness and contentment after school. He is taught conservation of health in school and he proves physically fit after school. He is taught ethics and he becomes morally strong.

School districts are interested in progress—not poverty. They are positive in their expenditures—not negative. They are constructive—not destructive. They are not encouraging poverty but affording an opportunity to avoid it. They are not doling our charity but making charity improbable. They are substituting motivated living for dull drab existing.

Economy is primarily the elemination of waste. It is shutting off the leaks. It is placing the dollar here it will bring the safest and best returns. School districts in America may spend more of that dollar than European countries for education but each community has the satisfaction of knowing that it is getting more for it. It is getting returns which produce a more progressive community—a better place to live—better social intercourse—more wholesome environment—greater respect for law and order—more culture advantages—more contentment and happiness—greater hope and a more cheerful optimism. To measure the worth of these by-products, remove the influence of church and school and see the social order disintegrate. the law abiding becomes lawless, the hope becomes despair, the optimism become pessimism, growth and progress change to decay, business industry and the professions become stagnate and prosperity reduced to rust and ruin—a picture no artist would care to paint.

The by-products from our investments in education assume a new emphasis and a new importance, by-products that are gaining appreciation by school officials, citizens and taxpayers.

—BOOST CIRCLEVILLE—

COLVILLE SPEAKS

In general let us set the child in our midst as our greatest wealth and most challenging responsibility. Let us exalt him above industry, above business, above politics, above all the selfish things that weaken and destroy a people. Let us know that the race moves forward through its children, and, by the grace of Almighty God, setting our faces toward the light, let us dedicate ourselves anew to the service and welfare of childhood.—J. L. Clifton, Ohio Director of Education, in Better Schools Bulletin.

Such was the vein of thought in which Robert G. Colville spoke to all the students in their respective classrooms Thursday morning stressing the fact that the three mill levy was a 15-year-old project familiar to our parents and not a new venture, that it was necessary to the continuance of our full time good schools for the 5 years to follow. After this he passed out circulars which read as follows:

To the Voters City School District, Circleville, Ohio:—

On next Tuesday, Nov. 5th, you will be asked to vote to extend the three mill tax levy for another period of five years for the benefit of our public schools. This is the same levy that you have given to the schools of our city for the past 15 years,—you are not asked for more money with which to run the schools, but for the same as voted in previous years.

We now have an enrollment of 1600 pupils; this is an increase of 150 pupils since you last voted to extend this levy. Each school room now has an average of over 40 pupils and some rooms have over 50 pupils.

Our schools must maintain certain standard requirements as to qualifications of teachers, courses of study, number of pupils per teacher and laboratory equipment, all fixed by the laws of Ohio and over which the Board of Education has no control, and this levy is absolutely necessary to meet these requirements.

Our schools are now on a high standard and we wish to keep and maintain that standard. It will give better training and preparation to the boys and girls of our city to become useful and loyal citizens if you will vote YES to continue this levy. By voting YES for this levy you will guarantee to our children a continuance of the splendid school opportunities for a further period of five years. Without this levy we will be compelled to shorten the school year and in other respects lower the standard of our schools

VOTE YES ON NEXT TUESDAY on this question by making your X on ballot as indicated below, as you will be doing the best thing for our children. DON'T OVERLOOK IT.

Respectfully,
The Board of Education of Circleville City School District
By Charles H. May, President,
J. R. Noecker, Clerk.
E. A. Brown, C. R. Barnhart
